

Blog Export: a programmer's best friend, <http://blog.php-tools.net/>

Tuesday, April 12, 2005

php-tools.net relaunch plans

We are currently planning a complete relaunch of the php-tools.net site, and would welcome any feedback on how we can improve it in the process. The new site will have a completely new design and backend (we are still deciding what we will use), but even though we have a good idea of what featureset the new site will need, you can still help. Tell us what you least and most liked about the current site, and what features you missed most: simply send a mail to [argh \[at\] php-tools \[dot\] net](mailto:argh[at]php-tools[dot]net) with your ideas / criticism / feature requests.

Thanks in advance from the Team!

Posted by argh in PHP at 13:39

It would be very cool, if you decide to build a navigation without these slow JS navigation bar at the top. It doesn't really work either on Mozilla nor on IE.

The rest on your site was pretty cool.

Think about, that the most content of your site is useful information / text, so a clear, minimalistic layout would fit your visitors needs.

Best regards from Luxembourg,

Viktor
Anonymous on Apr 12 2005, 17:32

That's exactly the direction we are planning to take.

Stephan
Anonymous on Apr 12 2005, 21:43

I can't find a link back to the home page from this blog page, is that intentional?
Anonymous on Apr 13 2005, 19:50

Thanks for pointing this out, it was not intentional I have added a section in the navigation for all available pat resources.
Anonymous on Apr 14 2005, 10:16

Thanks for your feedback!

As Stephan said, that is the direction we are planning to take. I have only one amendment: with very few exceptions, PHP sites are all very minimalistic. pat has always been known to go against that tide, and I would hate that to change (there wouldn't be anything left to design!) - so the new layout will be clearer and leaner, and without all the fancy only half working javascript, but it will not be entirely minimalistic.

Anonymous on Apr 14 2005, 10:26